Public Comment on Information Items

Robert Weinroth asked if there is a way to filter customer’s complaints.

Mr. Pessaro responded that COTA monitor in two ways they use a dashboard that is based on the total complaints and they also monitor complaints internal where they determine what is valid from invalid.

Andre Cadogan asked if the on-time performance standards for the Paratransit metrics is acceptable.

Mr. Pessaro responded that compared to other agency you are currently in line.

Andre Cadogan asked that when you look at slide 23 which shows that congestion can occur there a way to factor in variables.

Mr. Pessaro responded that we are not recommending Level of Service be used for the company.

Frank Stanzione asked what is requested from our Paratransit performance.

Clinton Forbes responded that it is currently set at 95%, which is a good goal but very aggressive which should be the goal and not the target.

Mr. Pessaro we recommend that you develop a dashboard that has performance measures for both fixed route and Paratransit.

Dennis Martin asked what the cost for the recommendations is.

Mr. Pessaro responded that the cost was not a part of their research; JTA hired a contractor to create a dashboard for them.

Mr. Mattingly asked where you got the three (3) minutes before and seven (7) minutes after
Mr. Pessaro responded that those numbers are industry standards.

Mr. Mattingly asked about routes that go a lengthy distance, he asked if it's fair to put the same measurement standards on that route when you're doing an on-time performance which may make that route look like a low productivity route.

Mr. Pessaro responded that a transit agency has the flexibility to categorize different routes and have different standards if you have a number of routes in your system like that you are well within your rights to adopt different standards for those routes.

Mr. Mattingly asked that customer satisfaction is totally measured on customer complaints, and if there is no complaints that would mean everyone is satisfied.

Mr. Pessaro responded No, you have an option that you can factor in customer satisfaction survey results into your performance management system.

11. Members of the Public

- Jacklyn Pagen commented on an incident that happened March 3, 2016 where a diver passed her house four times. She advised him to call dispatch and he acted like he couldn't get through eventually she jumped out of the bus when he dropped off the last passenger. She had to coach him and took the radio from him to speak with dispatch. She has yet to get any responded with reference to that incident. She also asked for the company to look into last minute changes and the minimum bags required when shopping, and also providing change to customers.

Mr. Mattingly advised Ms. Hegan that a member from our staff will speak with you at the end of this meeting.

- Javier Morales said that he has had a problem getting into contact with the right person at Palm Tran Connection, Saturday May 28, 2016 he left an item on a Paratransit bus he reported it missing they gave him the proper information regarding the missing item he also went to the vendor and they were unable to find the item. Despite all the reports he made he was unable to get into contact with anyone regarding his missing item and he would like to know what exactly happened.

Jeff McGregor responded that the way it is handled at Palm Tran Connection is that the person is referred to the contractor who would then go to see if it was turn in by the driver, each contractor has their own lost and found department which they maintain and when they find missing items they make arrangements for customers to get them back.

- Stanley Voice commented that he is very disappointed that there was no statics review at today's meeting.

- David London asked if there can be a timer in front so persons speaking can see it, also if you can consider restoring a bus stop a mile and a half from the intermodal downtown to the first stop south by uncle bob storage on Australian, he also commented the announcement systems that are on the buses that they are very loud and if you can find a reasonable level, and if there are any accommodations can be made for persons smoking at the intermodal because it is harmful to others.

- Mike commented that buses do no stop where the benches are located.

  Mr. Forbes commented that he would need to speak with operations and a staff member and will get a response back to him.
