Description:
This is a beginner level presentation on the most recent research on serving families when a parent is incarcerated. Family members are often negatively impacted by the incarceration. The presenter will identify the social and emotional impact of parental incarceration on youth and families. In addition, the presenter will describe key elements in evidence-based interventions addressing these concerns during and after a parent is incarcerated. These interventions include family therapy and social services.

Learning Objectives:
1. Identify the social and emotional impact of parental incarceration on youth and families
2. Describe key elements in evidence-based interventions for serving families during parental incarceration and after incarceration

Presenter:

Rachelle Sosu, Psy.D. completed her doctorate in clinical psychology at Nova Southeastern University. During her training, Dr. Sosu has provided evaluation and treatment to children, adolescents, and families experiencing a variety of presenting problems including mood disorders, behavioral problems, trauma reactions, and parent-child relationship problems. As a doctoral intern and postdoctoral fellow at the Youth Services Department, she has had the opportunity to work with families who are experiencing the effect of parental incarceration.
