Alzheimer’s and Brain Awareness Month

Each June, Alzheimer’s and Brain Awareness Month reminds us of the importance of protecting our brain health and supporting those living with memory loss. Alzheimer’s disease affects millions of individuals and families, gradually impacting memory, thinking, and daily life. This month encourages all of us—especially older adults—to learn the early signs, stay socially and mentally active, and take steps that support lifelong brain health such as regular exercise, healthy eating, and staying engaged in meaningful activities. It is also a reminder to show compassion and understanding to those affected, while working together to raise awareness and support research for better treatments and, one day, a cure.
