Description:

Most children are referred to mental health providers due to disruptive behavior problems (Kazdin & Weisz, 2017). Disruptive behaviors in children have been shown to negatively impact friendships, family relationships, academic achievement, and functioning in all settings. This training will allow participants to learn about Parent Child Interaction Therapy (PCIT), a highly researched and manualized behavioral treatment that emphasizes strengthening a parent child relationship and significantly decreasing disruptive behaviors. Additionally, participants will learn several evidence based strategies that can be incorporated into treatment of children with disruptive behavior problems.

Learning Objectives:

1. Identify and summarize the efficaciousness of Parent Child Interaction Therapy (PCIT)
2. Describe the purpose of utilizing PCIT in managing behavior concerns
3. Implement PCIT skills that can be incorporated into therapy sessions to manage behavior concerns
