Description:

Most children are referred to mental health providers due to disruptive behavior problems (Kazdin & Weisz, 2017). Disruptive behaviors in children have been shown to negatively impact friendships, family relationships, academic achievement, and functioning in all settings. This beginner level presentation focuses on the description and application of Parent-Child Interaction Therapy (PCIT) through lecture, video clips, and interactive activities. By the end of this training, participants will be able to discuss PCIT as a highly researched and manualized behavioral treatment for young children who display disruptive behaviors. Participants will be able to identify PCIT skills that strengthen a parent-child relationship and significantly decrease disruptive behaviors. Additionally, participants will learn several evidence-based strategies that can be incorporated into treatment of children with disruptive behavior problems.

Learning Objectives:

At the conclusion of the training, participants will be able to:

1. Identify and summarize the efficaciousness of Parent Child Interaction Therapy (PCIT)
2. Describe the purpose of utilizing PCIT in managing behavior concerns
3. Implement PCIT skills that can be incorporated into therapy sessions to manage behavior concerns

Presenter:

Emily Deming, Ph.D. is the Intake and Outreach Coordinator for Customized Behavioral Healthcare and a licensed psychologist in Florida and Ohio. She earned her master's and doctoral degree in Clinical Child Psychology from West Virginia University. Dr. Deming completed her doctoral internship and post-doctoral fellowship with the Palm Beach County Youth Services Department at the Education and Training Center. She is a certified Parent Child Interaction Therapy (PCIT) therapist and a certified PCIT Within Agency Trainer. Dr. Deming provides individual, family, and group therapy services as well as engaging in consultation and community outreach. Dr. Deming has experience working with people across the lifespan to address anxiety, depression, LGBTQ+ related issues, family conflict, trauma, and acting out behaviors. She believes that therapy is a space for safety as well as space to grow and be challenged to break out of old patterns or habits. Dr. Deming is passionate about making therapy a space for individuals and families who have been marginalized or discouraged from seeking support because of their identity.
