Description:

Sleep is an essential and often overlooked component of physical and mental health in youth. Healthy sleep is associated with improved cardiovascular health, metabolic health, mental health, cognitive functioning, emotion regulation, and overall quality of life for children and their parents. Unfortunately, more than a third of children and two-thirds of adolescents are not attaining adequate sleep hours. Preventative sleep health strategies for children include establishing a nightly routine, daily outside exercise time, screen time limits, elimination of environmental disruptions at night, and improved management of light. Bedtime routine concerns, including separation anxiety and noncompliance, can be addressed using behavioral strategies like the bedtime pass and motivational systems.

Learning Objectives:

After completion of this presentation, participants will be able to name the following:

- 1) Attendees will identify at least 3 psychosocial areas impacted by sleep in children and adolescents.
- 2) Attendees will describe at least 3 preventative strategies to help children and families improve their sleep hygiene.
- 3) Attendees discuss at least 1 specific behavioral strategy to overcome common bedtime routine problems.

Presenters:

Steve Arcidiacono, Ph.D., is a licensed clinical psychologist (PY10133) specializing in behavioral pediatrics and cognitive-behavioral therapy with youth and their families. Dr. Steve received his Ph.D. in clinical psychology from Nova Southeastern University.
