Description:

The presentation will focus on increasing disability awareness including identifying models of disability, history of discrimination, and general assessment and treatment recommendations. In addition, participants will examine their own values, assumptions, and biases that they may harbor toward individuals with disabilities. In addition, the presentation will include interactive participation including viewing of a video and completion of an experiential exercise. Furthermore, participants will be provided with a general understanding of statistics, disability types, and common definitions associated with the disability community.

Learning Objectives:

- 1) Describe three models of disability.
- 2) Explain the history of discrimination.
- 3) Identify general treatment and assessment considerations.

Presenter:

Craig Kramer, Psy.D. served on the National Council of Schools and Programs of Professional Psychology (NCSPP): Disabilities Taskforce, for approximately four (4) years, with the goals of addressing disability topics and issues in doctoral-level psychology programs related to the following areas: increase the amount of students and professors with disabilities throughout the field of psychology and mental health; create a safe, inclusive environment for students with disabilities; increase disabilities coursework and content in doctoral-level psychology program; and generated a Standing Committee for Disability within the NCSPP. Dr. Kramer completed his doctoral internship at the Children's Institute, Inc. in Los Angeles, CA and his postdoctoral fellowship at the Youth Services Department's Education & Training Center in West Palm Beach, FL. Dr. Kramer currently provides psychotherapy to individuals in assisted living and retirement homes, who present with a variety of physical and mental disabilities.
